FOR ACADEMIA · TEACHING, REWIRED

See the whole class before the first lecture.

A 20-minute questionnaire gives the teaching team one shared picture of how students learn, and where they will need help, before teaching starts.

ONE PICTURE OF THE WHOLE CLASS.
Who is ready, what is in the way, what to do.

THE PROBLEM WITH MEETING THE CLASS FIRST

By the time you see who is struggling, the module is half over.

Who disengages, who works hard and gets nowhere, who needs a different way into the material: most of it only shows once teaching is under way.

01

See the class first

Know how a group goes about learning, and where they will need help, before the first session.

02

Teach on purpose

Use that shared picture to shape the order, the activities and the support.

03

Check what stuck

Look past who finished, at what students can do afterwards.

HOW IT WORKS

Check readiness

Students complete the questionnaire before the module starts.

See the class

The Group View shows the teaching team the whole cohort on one page.

Shape the teaching

Vary order, activities and support using what the class shows.

Check what stuck

Follow up on what students can apply, and say what LearnSmartly contributed.

WHAT THE QUESTIONNAIRE LOOKS AT

Personal Mastery	How ready someone feels to learn: self-acceptance, curiosity, drive.
Emotional Resilience	How someone copes with pressure, setbacks and uncertainty.
Neuro-Quadrant	Thinking, intuition, feeling or the senses, and where energy comes from.
Enneagram Profile	What motivates someone, what they avoid, what they tend to miss.
Path to Learning	One practical plan the learner and their coach can use straight away.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

A student working hard, getting nowhere. The profile shows they learn by mapping things out and by doing, but come under strain in high-pressure moments. Study and practice change accordingly.

What to measure: practice quality and the next round of assessments.
